

MCCN Privacy Policy

Who says privacy policies shouldn't be beautiful?

At present, Mennonite Creation Care Network collects names, contact information and interests from individuals who would like to be part of our network. A form under the "Join Us" page enables you to share your information with us via an email.

As of January 2009, this information is not available on the web or to anyone other than the six members of the Mennonite Creation Care Council. We use it to send you a quarterly e-newsletter. We do not share it with other organizations. If someone called us and said, "Can you tell me if there are any Mennonites working on creation care in my area?" we would request permission before releasing your contact information.

Within the next year, MCCN hopes to publish a web-searchable directory of individuals and congregations working at creation care in order to enable networking. If you are already a member of Mennonite Creation Care Network, we will ask your permission before posting your contact information in our directory. At that point, our privacy policy will be updated.

Copyright and general use policies:

Stories and information posted on the MCCN web site are for the common good and intended to be shared. However, some of them are from other sources and are used by permission. In these cases, contact information is included at the end of the article. If you want to reprint one of these stories, you need to contact the original source.

Graphics and logos may not be reproduced without the consent of MCCN. If you have a request, contact jenniferhs@goshen.edu.

Mennonite Creation Care Network is hosted on the Goshen College server. This means that Goshen College's privacy policy also applies.
